ARE LOSING THEIR POSITIONS.

Men Who Are Not Naturalized Are

Not Wanted. There are a number of unnaturalized West Side men who are very nervous just now. They fear they will lose their positions unless they get naturalization papers and as court will not grant any such papers until September they are not at all pleased with the outlook.

The companies and individuals em ploying aliens dislike the work attached to keeping an account of the three cents a day which must be deducted from the wages of each alien and are already beginning to get rid of them. When once these men find themselves out of work it is almost impossible for them to get a position elsewhere and the situation for them really begins to

BOY HAS DISAPPEARED.

Information has been lodged with the West Side police of the disappearance of Eddie Hogan from St. Patrick's Orphanage. It is supposed that he has run away. The lad is nine years old and left yesterday shortly after din-ner. He was then dressed in jean knee pants, striped waist, and wore dark shoes and stockings. He is rather dark and very intelligent for his age.

NOT A NEW THING.

The Subject of Annexing Has Frequently Been Considered by Us. It is an interesting fact, writes E. J.

Gibson in the Philadelphia Press, that an annexation treaty was partially negotiated with Hawaii in 1854, be tween D. L. Gregg, representing the United States, and R. C. Willie, representing the Hawaiian King Kamchamcha. The subject was first seriously considered in 1851. At that time France was menacing the existence of the Hawaiian government and had a fleet anchored at Honolulu. It was under these circumstances that the king and the privy council the United States. A proclamation was issued March 10, 1851, by the Hawaiian king, placing the islands under the protection of the United States.

On the next day a conditional deed of concession of the kingdom to the United States was drawn up, signed and delivered in a sealed envelope to Hon. L. Severance, the commissioner of the United States, by two of the king's ministers.

This envelope was to be opened and to be acted upon only in case of an emergency, the signal of which was to be the raising of the flag of the United States above that of Hawaii over the fort. In that case the sovereignty of the islands was to be ceded to the United States.

By some means the British consul general learned what had been done, and informed the French representative, who thereupon withdrew the most obnerious of his demands and came to a settlement with the Hawaiian king. WEBSTER BLOCKED FRANCE.

Later, France made further demands, and the Hawaiian king made an appeal to the president of the Unit-ed States, and Daniel Webster, then secretary of state, made strong representations to the French government on the subject, but directed Mr. Severance, the United States commissioner, to return to the Hawaiian government the deed of cession which had been placed with him for safekeeping.

The Hawalian legislature empowered the king to place the kingdom under the protection of the United States, if necessary, "to shield it from insult and oppression." In the following year the ing was authorized to alienate his kingdom, "if indispensable to free it from the insult and oppression of any oreign power."

Nothing further was done until talk of annexation to the United States was revived in 1853, and a memorial was presented to the king in favor of annexation. The memorial created a good deal of excitement among the British and French residents and the representatives of those two governments

The feeling in favor of annexation grew stronger, notwithstanding the op-position of the missionaries. The king strongly favored annexation, because he was harrassed by the foreign powers, had once been dethroned by a Brit-ish naval force, and had repeatedly been compelled to make humiliating concessions at the canon's mouth and had other experiences of that charac-

DEFINITE ACTION IN 1854. The nigh chiefs agreed with him, and in February, 1854, the matter took definite shape and the king began negotiations for annexation.

Mr. Gregg, the American representative, entered into the negotiations in behalf of the United States, and he was fully authorized by his home government to draft a treaty. One was finally drawn up, but the British representative protested against it, and there was a long delay.

France joined with Great Britain in working against the treaty, but at last every obstacle was overcome when King Kamehameha suddenly took sick and died within a week, leaving the treaty unsigned.

That ended the first annexation treaty, which was negotiated as long ago as 1854. The second one was negotiated and signed under the Harrison administration in 1893, but was not acted on by the senate, and, when Mr. Cleveland became president he with-drew the treaty under circumstances that are now well known.

IN BED THREE YEARS.

Father Who Killed His Son Said to Be Fooling the Court.

St. Charles, Ill., special to the Chicago Journal says: A tragedy that occurred more than three years ago in this quiet township has a very strange sequel. On Jan. 6, 1894, Clark Burr, a farmer of Spring Brook, shot and killed his son Charles.

The Burrs were among the foremosi people. The killing was done in the heat of the moment, Charles was eighteen years of age. The quarrel was over a trivial affair.

The father had forbidden another son, Harry, from going to Elgin to take more lessons on the violin. He had gone on the day of the tragedy. Charles and his father discussed the matter, and Charles declared Harry could take care of himself. The father retorted that he wanted no impudence, and the boy said he also could look out for himself. The two were at the table. The father held in his hand a table knife. He ordered his son to leave the house. Charles stepped to an adjoining room and got a revolver. The elder Burr procured a shotgun from the kitchen wall. They re-entered the dining room. Burr again ordered his son to depart. The boy refused. Then the father shot.

There were two witnesses, Rich Rockman, a farmhand, and Maude Burr. 8 years old, niece of Clark Burr. The mother was in the adjoining room. She returned in time to catch in her arms her murdered boy.

The old man-he is not very old, either, just past 55-has never been tried. His condition is the strangest part of the affair. He seemed to go all to pieces. There was a complete collapse. He took to his bed. On the coroner's finding it manslaughter he was held in $10,000 bonds. For months a deputy sheriff slept near him. He was considered at the point of death. A look of utter despair was on his face. He appeared like a man of 80. He had lived all his life in section 7, St. Charles township. He would die there, they may be a trial, Clark Burr's bondsmen may take more interest in the Burr's condition is a mystery. He has improved. He has gained in flesh, An Elgin man who was at his home recently to buy sows says Burr is as bright as a dollar, "Physically," said a farmer who lives a mile or two from Burr's, "he is comparatively well." Some say he remains in bed more than is necessary, and insinuate that at night he attends to business that most men do in daylight.

For months the inquiry was: "How is Clark Burr? Will he ever be tried?' So sure were all that he never would live to be tried that the deputy sheriff was dismissed, and the only vigit was that kept by his friends, who aited for death.
